

The Independent Emissions Market Advisory Committee considers peer-reviewed scientific evidence essential for making sound public policy decisions, and calls on state policymakers to consider peer-reviewed scientific evidence about the performance of California's climate policies without bias or political interference. Academic researchers must be free to present peer-reviewed findings without being subject to personal attacks.